

File Created by Blogging Rebirth WP Plugin

Good Idea to Offer Your Dog Bullysticks?

There is nothing greater than seeing your dog having a good time. Whether he's running around running after squirrels, being pet behind the ears, or eating a fun, healthy treat, you have to love seeing a happy dog. There's a treat you can give your dog that takes this happiness to a whole new level – Bullysticks.

What the bejesus are Bully Sticks?

We all want to make sure the treats we provide our dogs are healthy, so it's only logical to ask what Bully Sticks are made of. Okay. You should take a deep breath. Are you ready? Good. Bullysticks are made from the private parts of bulls. Ahh, now the Bully Stick name makes perfect sense, right?

Okay, so it doesn't paint a pretty picture, but Bully Sticks are 100% protein. The source of these treats that get dogs in such a tizzy is made from muscle tissue. Which means that Bully Sticks are made from the kind of protein that is very nutritious for canines. Yes, it's no walk in the park for the bull in question, but you can't argue with results. Dogs love Bully Sticks and they happen to be very nutritious too.

Other popular dog treats beside Bully Sticks

A large number of people let their dogs go hog wild on rawhide treats, and never think twice about it. Rawhides are certainly one of the most popular dog treats, but they aren't beneficial for your dog's physical condition. Some dogs get sick when they eat them and they don't digest well at all. If given the choice between something that dogs love that is good for them, and something they might enjoy that isn't healthy, I would rather give the dog the healthier choice.

There are other treats that dogs love, like roasted pig ears for dogs, contain a lot of protein. Bullysticks certainly aren't the only alternative when it comes to high protein, healthy treats; you do have choices.

What's most important is buying a healthy treat that your dog will have a good time eating. No one is quite sure why, but dogs go absolutely wild for Bully Sticks. They can't tell us why find them so darn delicious, so we just have to trust in the reaction they give when you give them one to gnaw on.

Just the smell of Bully Sticks can get a dog's attention in a split second. Once they are able to sink their teeth, it's like watching a kid on Christmas morning. Hey, you just can't account for taste. A Bully Stick is not something that we would want to eat, but that doesn't mean we should spoil the fun for our dogs. Besides, nothing is better than the gratitude dogs show when you give them one of their favorite treats.

You can also find this article published on Good Idea to Offer Your Dog Bullysticks?