Twitter: Follow the airlines and get the latest airfare deals

Social networking is one of the last markup tools. Media media - especially Twitter and Facebook - has been labeled as a fad for the youth market, but is not a passing phenomenon - All companies quickly learn to use it as a platform for the future of marketing is essential. Not only businesses but to do this. Take the Obama campaign, for example - which used many networks social and guess what, this measure was a success! That's why this technique is followed by many airlines. Take a look at Twitter today.

First, we must mention the airlines most followed on Twitter. JetBlue Airways (JetBlue @), for example, more than 1.3 million followers. Just behind him are Southwest Airlines (@ Southwest), United Airlines (@ UnitedAirlines) JetBlue kid (last minute flights Jet Blue offers posted every Monday @ JetBlueCheep), Virgin America (@ VirginAmerica) American Airlines (@ AAirwaves), title = "Delta Air Lines"> Delta Air Lines (@ DeltaAirLines) title = "Alaska Airlines"> Alaska Airlines (@ ALASKAAIR), Air New Zealand (@ flyairnz) and many more.

It is easy to follow each of them and get airfare future sales. At the other site if you want to keep more airlines starting to be a bit tricky. Imagine that you follow for example, 20 people (friends, companies ..) and to add 10 more airlines add say 50 tweets a day! Moreover it will have to prepare tweets that you are not even interested in (for example, "airline wishes you good morning")! And lost in the huge amount of tweets in particular.

In fact, find a solution very easy as finding the best sales airfare without unnecessary hundreds of tweets. There are a couple of places of gathering as much information about offers of Current and upcoming flights airfare sales as possible.
